

Summary

- Precision-Recall curve characterizes the overall accuracy of a ranked list
- The actual utility of a ranked list depends on how many top-ranked results a user would examine
- Average Precision is the standard measure for comparing two ranking methods
 - Combines precision and recall
 - Sensitive to the rank of every relevant document

What if we have multiple levels of relevance judgments?