Stationary process

Random process f is stationary, if its finite-dimensional distributions depend only on relative position of the points